August 25th, 1922.

Mr. Fred Currie,
Breton Hall,
86th St. & Broadway,
New York.

Dear Sir:-

Regarding the gold coin which you left here, I beg to advise that Mr. Newell tells me that it is probably worth from eight to ten dollars; that he already has a number of them, and is therefore not in a position to acquire this one. If you would accept eight dollars for it, I think I can find another collector who might take it, but as these coins are not uncommon I am afraid you will not find a dealer who will offer you more than this sum for this piece.

Awaiting your word, I am,

Very truly yours,

Secretary.
